Contents

Executive summary xi

About the authors xix

About CILEX xxix

Introduction: Why soft skills are now core legal skills xxxi
By Sara Fowler, president, CILEX

Part I: Mastering Yourself

Chapter 1: Emotional intelligence in legal practice – developing a superpower for lawyers 1
By Kim Tasso, managing director, RedStarKim
What does emotional intelligence really mean? Why is it important? 2
The four key components of emotional intelligence 4
Self-awareness and emotional intelligence under pressure 7
Managing emotional triggers in adversarial environments 8
Empathy without losing objectivity 11
EI as a risk management and leadership tool 12
Emotional intelligence and wellbeing 15

Chapter 2: Building resilient lawyers and legal teams 19
By Paula Davis, JD, MAPP, founder and CEO, Stress & Resilience Institute
What the legal profession can learn from the US Army 20
Lawyers and soldiers – there are similarities 21
Building resilience in law 22
Strategies for building individual resilience 24
Strategies for building team resilience 26

Chapter 3: Grief and trauma in legal practice – managing exposure in a loss-saturated profession 33
By Tom Spence
The hidden emotional landscape of legal work 33
Suppression has cognitive, ethical and leadership consequences 34
Understanding grief in professional contexts 34
Grief as cumulative exposure 34
The contextual nature of grief 35
Grief as an operational reality 35
Stress, trauma, and the continuum of exposure 36
How suppression became the norm in legal culture 36
Impact of unprocessed exposure 38
Regulation vs suppression – developing a critical professional competence 39
The one grain approach – practical navigation of grief and trauma 40
Practical skills for lawyers – managing exposure in practice 42
Collective resilience – a strategic reframe 43
Leadership and culture in law firms 45
Cultural change requires consistent practice, clear accountability and visible leadership 45
Steadiness in law – building grief-literate firms 45

Chapter 4: Neurodiversity in legal practice 49
By Danielle Gleicher-Bates and Emma Llanwarne, neurodiversikey
What neurodiversity means 49
The disability cross-over 50
Strengths-based thinking vs deficit-based assumptions 51
Identity-first vs person-first language 51
Why law attracts – and challenges – neurodivergent thinkers 52
Disclosure – choices, risks, and boundaries 53
Reasonable adjustments 54
Practicing as a neurodivergent lawyer 55
Requesting reasonable adjustments 56
Masking, burnout, and imposter syndrome in legal environments 57
Managing your own working style with insight and self-compassion 58
Working with neurodivergent colleagues and clients 59
Making reasonable adjustments 60
Serving clients' best interests and needs 62

Chapter 5: Time management and prioritization 65
By Nikki Alderson
Introduction 65
Why lawyers struggle with time 66
Focus, energy, and avoiding burnout 68
Managing competing stakeholders and deadlines 71
Practical, sustainable solutions for busy legal professionals 72
Conclusion 78

Chapter 6: Decision-making under pressure 81
By Alice Boullier de Branche and Jean-Baptiste Lebelle, A&O Shearman
Common decision-making traps for lawyers 82
Deciding under pressure, the role of wellbeing 83
Balancing risk, judgment, and incomplete information 84
When perfectionism becomes a disability 85
Collaborative decision making and collective responsibility 86
Standing by decisions and revisiting them when needed 86
Optimal busyness applies to decision making 87
Practical tools for deciding under pressure 88
Conclusion 89

Part II: Working Effectively with Others

Chapter 7: How to have difficult conversations 91
By Susan Heaton-Wright, founder, Superstar Communicator
Why difficult conversations define legal careers 91
What makes conversations "difficult"? 92
Introducing The SuperStar Communicator™ approach to difficult conversations 93
The conversation grid 94
The PREPARE model (for before the conversation) 95
The OPEN model 98
The LISTEN model 99
The CALM technique (emotional regulation) 100
Real-world scenarios 101
Voice and presence 102
Non-verbal communication 103

The five-minute hack – a quick exercise before any difficult conversation 104
Conclusion 104

Chapter 8: Giving and receiving feedback 107
By Wayne Hassay, managing partner, Maguire Schneider Hassay, LLP
Objections to a constructive culture of feedback 108
Build the operating standard 109
Implementation risks 112
The ultimate implementation risk – a failed loop poisons morale 114
Regaining control when the risks appear 114
Managers giving – and the team receiving – all feedback 114
Conclusion – this is not a gimmick 116

Chapter 9: Delegation and supervision – leading modern legal teams with confidence, clarity and humanity 117
By Pam Loch, Solicitor and CEO, with contributions from Lauren McLaughlin, solicitor, and Kate Rigby, HR director, Loch
Delegation and supervision as core leadership capabilities 117
Setting expectations and boundaries with modern teams 118
Managing people for quality, efficiency, and development 120
Supervising without micromanaging 122
Psychological safety and supportive challenge 124
Delegation as a leadership skill, not a liability 124
Building resilient teams through delegation 125
Learning from delegation failures 126
Clearer delegation, stronger supervision, better outcomes 127

Chapter 10: Negotiation as communication 129
By Jonathan Middleburgh, principal, Edge International
Negotiation as a core communication skill 129
Negotiation as communication process 129
Two philosophies – positional vs interest-based negotiation 130
The communication toolkit 132
Context and medium – where and how negotiation happens 135
Negotiation with your own client 135
Communication as a core skill 136

Chapter 11: Agile and lean – new ways of collaborating and organizing work 137
By Maria Govis, KPMG
Introduction 137
Where Agile and Lean come from 137
Agile and Lean for legal teams 141
Working smarter – technology tools for modern legal practice 148
Conclusion 150

Part III: Influence, Visibility and Career Development

Chapter 12: Networking with purpose 153
By Rebecca Overend, business development manager and associate, Irwin Mitchell
Why networking matters more than ever 153
Debunking myths and reframing networking for lawyers – why networking is a skill, not a personality 154
Building genuine professional relationships 155
Internal vs external networks 160
Maintaining connections over time 163
Networking for different career stages 165
Practical frameworks 167
Making networking a sustainable habit 168

Chapter 13: Turning relationships into results – mastering business development in modern practice 169
By Yuliya I. LaRoe, JD, MBA, BD and leadership coach for lawyers and CEO at LeadWise Group, Inc
The RainMasters™ Framework – the foundations of sustainable rainmaking 169
Discovering your natural rainmaking style 171
Upgrading your business development mindset 173
Developing a winning business development strategy 176
The operating system of sustainable rainmaking 178
Bringing it all together 183

Chapter 14: Developing your professional profile 185
By Rebecca Harding, Saltwhistle
Why you cannot afford to ignore this 185
How clients actually choose you 185
Defining who you are 186
The psychology that helps you win 187
Your digital presence 188
Creating content that gets you noticed 190
The new digital landscape – what you also need to be doing 191
Making it happen 195
In summary 196

Part IV: Leading Through Change

Chapter 15: Change management for lawyers – the human architecture of change in legal 199
By Dr Andrea Miskolczi, MBA, managing director, InterAlia Consulting
Introduction 199
The sponsor – permission as leadership 200
Managers and partners – the daily architects of culture 201
The change leader – bridging the gap between left and right 202
The project manager – when structure serves people 203
The power user – the most credible proof of concept 204
The change champion – the bridge between vision and practice 205
The sponsor alliance – when one sponsor is not enough 206
Conclusion 207

Chapter 16: The modern digital lawyer 209
By Daan Potjer, director, commercial and legal excellence, Loyens & Loeff N.V.
Introduction 209
Future-proof skills and mindset for lawyers 210
How AI is transforming lawyer workloads 211
Working smarter, not harder 212
Fostering an innovative culture in the firm 213
Rethinking the lawyer's value proposition in an AI era 214
Embrace and adopt new technology 216

Chapter 17: Becoming a trusted advisor and beyond 219
By Stuart Maister, chief storyteller, Strategic Narrative
First, be trusted 219
What is trust? 220
Be a trusted... what? 224
Being a Trusted Partner 225
Trusted partnership can bring firm-wide benefits 226
Focus on the clients who are willing to build a partnership 227
Be intentional about trust 227

Chapter 18: The profoundly human law firm 229
By Jonathan Middleburgh, principal, Edge International
Learning from other shifts in technology 230
The shifting landscape – what AI can and cannot do 230
The Profoundly Human Lawyer – a model 231
The skills matrix 234
Developing human skills – practical approaches 235
A word on AI literacy 237
The competitive advantage that cannot be automated 237

About Globe Law and Business 239